Dear Maui County GET Committee,

I support the Council seeking to settle the Lahaina Injection Well case (HAWAII WILDLIFE FUND, ET AL. V. COUNTY OF MAUI, RELATING TO THE CLEAN WATER ACT) as per CC 19-225,

The County of Maui should not be spending money attempting to gut the Clean Water Act. Instead, the money should be spent ensuring no pollutants reach the ocean from our wastewater facilities.

Sincerely,
Alfred Wolf

Dear Maui County GET Committee,

I support the Council seeking to settle the Lahaina Injection Well case (HAWAII WILDLIFE FUND, ET AL. V. COUNTY OF MAUI, RELATING TO THE CLEAN WATER ACT) as per CC 19-225,

The County of Maui should not be spending money attempting to gut the Clean Water Act. Instead, the money should be spent ensuring no pollutants reach the ocean from our wastewater facilities.

I grew up on Maui in the 1970's; with Pristine waters and quiet towns and lots of Aloha spirit, it was still a paradise. There are many more visitors now. Many locals have moved away, and of those that have stayed, many are struggling like they never did before. The waters and reefs with so many more people are also struggling. The paradise is waning. It needs no additional challenges of waste pollutants in the waters. You will certainly drive away tourists with that, and Maui needs their money.

Some years ago I surfed San Diego. In the water, you could see the sewage drift creeping up the coastline from south of the U.S. boarder. It was unsightly, it stunk and was scary to think about swimming and surfing in water contaminated so. We got out and did not get back in. Why would we do this to our waters on Maui?

Get out of this courtroom. Use your monies to figure out another solution. There is always another way. Dumping in the ocean is not an option. It never should be

Amanda Ploski

Dear Maui County GET Committee,

The injection well case only one of many where Corporation Counsel has vastly overstepped their authority by withholding settlement offers from the council.

Their abuse of authority is unacceptable. Pat Wong is not the only lawyer responsible for these acts. Moana Luety is doing the same exact thing currently by withholding a settlement agreement offered to the county from Chris Salem over the faulty decision to not enforce outstanding SMA permit violations in West Maui. The county IS at fault and should be held accountable to make the issue right. Yet in order to protect themselves and their agenda Moana Luety and Brian Billberry abuse their authority.

There needs to be a house cleaning at Corporation Counsel. Pat Wong's departure is just the start, many more staff there are conflicted and we need to assert ourselves to have them removed.

The County of Maui should not be spending money attempting to gut the Clean Water Act. Instead, the money should be spent ensuring no pollutants reach the ocean from our wastewater facilities.

In the over 40 years I have lived on Maui I have seen massive degradation to our coastal reef ecosystems from human created pollutants entering the ocean. When one compares the reefs situated below developments of businesses, homes, and golf courses to reefs in areas where there is no development it is very clear that pollutants entering the ocean create algae growth and a decrease in fish and ocean wildlife.

Please adhere to the Clean Water Act and make sure that the county of Maui and the state of Hawaii take a leadership role in protecting our fragile island ecosystem for future generations.

Thank you.

Dear Maui County GET Committee,

Please ask that the County settle the Lahaina Injection Well case and look into why litigation like this, which is obviously frivolous, has continued. Who is benefiting from continuing senseless litigation like this? Logic tells us something's not right here.

As well, if there could be a review of all outstanding litigation, especially the Timeshare Resort case under appeal now, that would be great. That's potentially the largest single financial liability the County has according to Sandy Baz's Hearing Testimony.

The Honorable County Council
County of Maui

Subject: CC-19-224 – Hawaii Wildlife v. County of Maui, CC-19-225 – Hawaii Wildlife v. County of Maui,
GET-26 – Hawaii Wildlife v. County of Maui

Honorable Council,

I am an environmental engineer who resides in Wailuku. For the past eleven years it has been my pleasure to assist the County of Maui with its wastewater issues through my employment at Brown and Caldwell, an environmental engineering firm. In my role as project manager I have led the efforts to evaluate potential options to eliminate injection well use at the County's four wastewater reclamation facilities (WWRFs). This work has included investigation of land treatment, satellite treatment plants, and other options. I have also served as an expert witness in support of the County of Maui during the penalty phase of the subject lawsuit. Today I write as a private citizen and ratepayer to urge your Council to continue to support the appeal of the subject lawsuit to the United States Supreme Court.

For approximately 40 years the EPA's interpretation of the Clean Water Act (CWA) provided the regulated community (including the County of Maui) with a clear "bright line" boundary between two regulatory programs, the CWA and the Safe Drinking Water Act. The regulated community was able to make large capital investments in the infrastructure needed to protect human health and the environment with confidence because the clear boundaries between the two regulatory programs provided assurances that the technologies that were implemented would provide the necessary level of treatment to meet the regulatory goals.

The District Court ruling on subject lawsuit, and subsequent 9th Circuit Court of Appeals ruling, eliminates the clear "bright line" between the two regulatory programs and complicates the County's efforts to eliminate injection well use at the WWRFs. In my professional opinion, transition to land treatment systems represents the most practical (and economical) means to eliminate injection well use without constructing ocean outfalls. Transition to land treatment offers a way to significantly reduce the County's environmental impact compared to the status quo injection wells. However, the rulings on the subject lawsuit create regulatory uncertainty as to whether certain forms of land treatment will meet the CWA requirements. The County could face additional lawsuits in the future, despite having invested $150 million to $200 million to transition to land treatment and significantly reducing the environmental impacts of the community.

The United States Supreme Court has agreed to hear the case because of conflicting Circuit Appellate Court rulings on the issue. As the ultimate authority to interpret the meaning of the CWA, the United States Supreme Court is the only body that can provide clarity to this controversy of local and national importance. No matter how it rules, the Supreme Court decision will provide us with the regulatory clarity that is needed to successfully transition away from injection wells. I urge your Council to continue to support the appeal of the lawsuit.

Sincerely,

Craig Lekven, P.E.

For too long the County has been avoiding it's clear responsibilities under the law in a manner that is wholly inconsistent with the State Constitution as well as Federal Law. It is also not reflective of the will of the voters who put you in office to responsibly administer the duties of the office - The Primary duty being to conserve and keep clean our invaluable public trust resources.

Settle the case, do what the law requires and start the clean up. It would be ANOTHER crime if the corrupt politicians in Washington use this case to undermine legislation that was passed for the good of all.

Subject: Avoid Supreme Court Re: Clean Water Act/ Lahaina Injections Wells case

Dear Maui County GET Committee,

Dear County official,

I agree with the statement below. Due to the current Federal Administration leaning towards loosening environmental protections, taking the Maui Case to The Supreme Court risks the safe guards currently in place in the Clean Water Act and could impact the rest country allowing more indirect pollution of our water ways, which are a public trust.

The cost of litigation for Maui County in this case is better spent on mitigating the waste water problem with a responsible solution, including reuse for irrigation and preventing pollutants from entering the ocean due to the injection wells.

There is much to be done to protect our natural environment. A clean environment is our right as per our State constitution:

(Each person has the right to a clean and healthful environment, as defined by ... Hawai'i Constitution, Article XI, Section 1:)

This is one course of action that needs to be taken and does not need to be litigated.

Be Pono. Settle.

Dear Maui County GET Committee,

I have been freediving in the Kihei/Wailea/Makena area for only 3 years. In this period of time I have seen corals crumble to rubble, algae coat the majority of coral life & I've had to rescue a turtle from drowning due to dead/decaying coral falling onto a turtle & trapping it on the sea floor.

I have been volunteering to test water quality on the south shore for a year & have seen the data first hand that shows how polluted the waters of Maui are even being not directly exposed to the injection well sights. I have heard first hand accounts from tourists who've been visiting these waters for 20+ years that have said they have seen the decline of fish life in the sea!

For the love of the 'aina, I implore you to stop polluting the sea with poop! If you care at all for the life that is left in the sea, please find a healthy alternative for dealing with human wastes!

If Maui is to have any hope of allowing it's sea life to live & thrive, this method of dealing with waste needs to end & a healthy alternative needs to begin ASAP!

I support the Council seeking to settle the Lahaina Injection Well case (HAWAII WILDLIFE FUND, ET AL. V. COUNTY OF MAUI, RELATING TO THE CLEAN WATER ACT) as per CC 19-225,

The County of Maui should not be spending money attempting to gut the Clean Water Act. Instead, the money should be spent ensuring no pollutants reach the ocean from our wastewater facilities.

I am appalled that the last administration chose to subvert the law rather than comply. How dare they waste taxpayer time and money, trying to get around something that is good for all of us. I am encouraged that the current administration is taking an entirely different approach. Mahalo nut loa.

Testimony to Maui County Council
Hawaii Wildlife v. County of Maui

My name is Dr. Steven Dollar. I am presently employed by the University of Hawaii at Mānoa as a Coastal Resources Specialist in the School of Ocean and Earth Science & Technology, and am also president of Marine Research Consultants, Inc. My academic credentials includes MS and PhD. degrees from the Department of Oceanography at the University of Hawaii at Mānoa. The subject of my MS degree was documenting the natural and human stressors that shape the composition of coral reefs in Hawaii, while my PhD work documented the environmental effect from deep water sewage discharges on Oahu. My present work includes serving as Co-principal Investigator on a project funded by NASA to develop remote sensing tools to map coral reefs around the world. In Hawaii, I am currently contracted by the Counties of Maui and Hawaii, Hawaii American Water Co. and the U.S. Navy to conduct NPDES permit required Zone of Mixing monitoring on ocean sewage discharges. I also am contracted to do similar NPDES monitoring on point source discharges to the ocean from power plants, aquaculture and agricultural discharges. In the 1990's I was awarded a grant by the U.S. Environmental Protection Agency to investigate the causes of algal blooms in West Maui. In 2011 I was engaged by the County of Maui to conduct assessments to determine the factors affecting coral reefs in Ma'alaea Bay.

Based on this academic and professional experience I, along with Dr. Eric Hochberg of the Bermuda Institute of Ocean Sciences, were retained in 2014 by the legal firm of Hunton Andrews Kurth to conduct scientific studies to evaluate the effects to the marine environment from groundwater seeps off of Kahekili Beach Park in West Maui. This work was predicated on the findings of the final report produced by Dr. Craig Glenn entitled "Lahaina Groundwater Tracer Study (GTS) –Lahaina Maui, Hawaii. Final Report (2013) which presented data indicating that there is a hydrologic connection between the LWRF Injection Wells 3 and 4 and nearshore ocean waters in the form of discharge from two groups of groundwater "seeps" located near the shoreline off of Kahekili Beach Park.

The studies conducted by Dr. Hochberg and myself consisted of two parts: 1) an evaluation of water chemistry designed to trace the distribution of sewage-related material that flowed from the seeps, and 2) an evaluation of the effects of the seeps on the composition of the coral reef community off of Kahekili. The results of these studies were presented in an expert disclosure report in 2015 in the Hawaii Wildlife Fund, et al. v. County of Maui lawsuit. A brief summary of the findings of these investigations is presented below. More detailed information is available on request.

With respect to water chemistry, there was no dispute that a small fraction of the wastewater discharged through two of the LWRF wells flows to the nearshore ocean through two seep groups in the nearshore zone while the remainder of the effluent flows to the deep ocean. While other investigators measured the chemical composition of the water within the seeps prior to discharge to the ocean, our intent was to measure how the water from the seeps is distributed over the reef. A field sampling program carried out in August 2014 consisted of collecting 198 water samples at 72 sites along nine transect lines that extended from Kahekili Beach to approximately 1,000 feet offshore. Two of the lines passed through the seep sites, one was between the seeps, and three were north and south, respectively, of the seeps. At each sampling site, water samples were collected at the ocean surface, midway in the water column and just above the ocean floor. Results showed that throughout the sampling area, concentrations of nutrients (nitrogen and phosphorus) were higher near the shoreline and decreased with distance from shore. This pattern represents the typical situation along Hawaiian shorelines where naturally occurring groundwater enters the ocean at the shoreline and is mixed with ocean water.

The highest concentrations of dissolved inorganic nutrients occurred just above the sea floor over the seeps. However, at the ocean surface directly over the seeps, nutrient concentrations were substantially reduced. Hence, even though the water discharging from the seeps is far fresher than salty ocean water causing it to rise in the water column, it was quickly mixed to near background levels by ocean waves and currents. Elevated levels of dissolved nitrogen and phosphorus extended approximately 70 feet from the seeps, and did not reach the areas of major reef growth. At distances further from the seeps, there was no indication of enrichment of sewage related nutrients near the seafloor where corals occur. In addition to the documented dilution to near background levels, net transport of water from the seeps is not toward the offshore reef, but rather along shore over areas where corals do not occur. All of these factors point to the conclusion that while the seeps may be enriched with nutrients and other water quality constituents compared to ocean water, there is no basis to expect that this discharge is presently affecting coral communities.

It is also important to note that during the water chemistry survey, all of the recorded temperatures over the reef were above 26.5°C. The temperature of the "anomalously warm buoyant fluid emerging from the seeps" used in the GTS "Aerial Infrared Sea Surface Temperature Mapping" was 26.5°C. Hence, the ambient temperature throughout the reef in August 2014 was equal to or higher than the supposed elevated temperature anomalies from the seep discharge. With natural conditions exceeding the temperature anomalies from the seep, any alleged effect of the seeps in terms of water temperature can be disregarded.

The second part of our investigations had the objective of creating a descriptive and quantitative picture of the biological structure of Kahekili reef. To do this 71 survey sites were selected, extending from the shoreline to the offshore limit of coral occurrence along the length of Kahekili Beach. At each site, 50–100 digital photographs were taken of the reef. Using computer programs these photos were stitched together to form a single seamless image (photomosaic). Using another computer program the composition of each photomosaic was determined, and tabulated to provide the biological composition of each site. The results of these analyses provide a robust indication of the effects of the seeps on coral community structure.

The data from field surveys, in conjunction with satellite images of the West Maui coastal area, was used to create maps of cover of the various components of the reef (e.g., coral, algae, sand). The resulting maps showed that coral cover is low at the shoreline throughout the survey area, and increases with distance from shore. The nearshore zone where the seeps are located consists of a predominantly bare hard bottom with less than 10% coral cover. Corals are limited in this shallow area because of breaking waves and sand scour. The seeps occur in shallow water near the shoreline in a shallow pavement zone where physical conditions prevent significant coral occurrence along the entire shoreline. Hence, while there are few corals growing at the seeps, there are similarly few corals growing at similar depths and distances from the shoreline everywhere else along the West Maui.

It is also apparent from the maps that there are no significant abnormalities in coral community composition at the sites of the seep discharges. Should the seeps be causing impacts to coral, it would be expected that there would be "halos" of reduced cover around the seeps. No such halos or gradients of changing benthic covers were observed with respect to distance from the seeps.

It can be assumed that some fraction of the injected effluent has reached the seeps during the entire period of operation of the LWRF. If effluent had been impacting reef structure and function continuously for the last three decades, it would be apparent by clear gradients of damaged or dead zones across the reef marked by increasing levels of dead coral with proximity to the seeps. However, data from all sources reveals that there are no such impacts. In fact, data from the UH Coral Reef Assessment and Monitoring Program indicates that there has been increases in coral abundance from 1999 to 2012. The NOAA "Baseline assessments for coral reef community structure and demographics on West Maui : data report, 2017" concludes that "With mean coral cover ranging between 30% and 58%, the Wahikuli and Honokōwai Watersheds contain the greatest extent and concentration of coral-rich habitat in West Maui, with relatively well developed, spur-and-groove coral reef complexes off Canoe Beach, Kahekili Beach Park, and Honokōwai Point." There is no mention in the NOAA report of impacted corals at Kahekili.

Another often mentioned, but never documented assertion, is that algal blooms are caused by the LWRF discharge. As mentioned above, under the auspices of a US EPA grant, I studied the causal effects of algal blooms that occurred in West Maui in the 1990's. One of the major conclusions of these studies was that nutrient enrichment from sugarcane production provided the most likely driver for algal blooms. No algae that caused bloom conditions during the 1990s has occurred since that time. In addition, no algal blooms have occurred at the seep sites since they have been under investigation. As the LWRF has been in operation for approximately three decades, if it was the cause of algal blooms, they would be occurring.

A final point that appears to have become misinterpreted is the perception that the LWRF is unique in terms of discharging treated effluent to the ocean. With the exception of a relatively small amount of treated effluent that is re-used for irrigation and fertilization of non-consumptive land uses (primarily golf courses and landscaping), ALL treated sewage in Hawaii is discharged to the ocean through either injection wells or ocean outfalls. Treated effluent is discharged through ocean diffusers on the Islands of Oahu, Hawaii and Kauai. Hence, all sewage disposal in Hawaii has a hydrologic connection with the ocean.

Several of these outfalls occur in shallow water in reef habitats. Figure 1 shows diffuser ports from the Hilo Wastewater Treatment Plant (top) and the East Honolulu Wastewater Treatment Plant (bottom). Each of these ocean outfalls consists of multiple ports at water depths of 35-40 feet. Clearly visible plumes of treated effluent can be seen discharging from these ports and rising in the water column. Live corals are growing on the diffusers, sometimes in the direct path of the effluent. There is no growth of algae, and water clarity is not affected by the discharge, indicating there are not high levels of plankton or suspended materials in the water. Ongoing NPDES mandated monitoring in the vicinity of the East Honolulu ocean outfall indicates that over the last 30 years the major effect to coral community structure in the area is the impact from periodic storm waves. Hence, even when discharged from diffuser ports directly over coral reefs in a much higher volume and more concentrated fashion than occurs at the diffuse submarine seeps off Kahekili, there is no long-term impacts to coral reefs. Hence, there can be no a priori assertion that sewage discharge to the ocean at Kahekili results in negative impacts to benthic communities.

In summary, results of my scientific investigations reveal that the major factors affecting water quality in the Kahekili area are naturally occurring discharge of groundwater along the shoreline. The highest values of chemical constituents associated with groundwater discharge occurred at the two areas where the submarine seep discharge occurs. However, the effects of the seeps are restricted to a small area and these effects are quickly diluted to background levels over the reef where corals occur. Investigations of the reef community indicate that there are no discernable effects that can be attributable to the seep discharge. As the LWRF has been in operation for several decades, any negative effects to reef structure would be clearly apparent at present. This is not the case.

EXHIBIT 1. Photographs of ocean discharge diffusers in Hilo Bay off the Hilo Wastewater Treatment Plant (top) and off Sandy Beach off the East Honolulu Wastewater Treatment Plant (bottom). Both diffusers are at a water depth of approximately 35-40 feet. Concentrated streams of treated effluent of high nutrient concentration, low salinity, and elevated temperature relative to receiving water can be clearly seen in both photos. Note presence of live corals on both outfall structures, lack of presence of filamentous algae, and clarity of water. Both ocean outfalls have been in operation since the 1970's. All photographs taken by S. Dollar.

Boracay Island was shut down because people were swimming in their own waste, getting sick, and giving the destination a black eye. Will Maui follow the same track? Or will you wisely invest in protecting, conserving and restoring the natural assets such as reefs, beaches and fish that the aina has provided?

Since our lifestyle, sustenance and economy are based on the interest provided by these natural assets, it would be imprudent to damage them.
