Additional Comments:

We have been a legally operating vacation rental (East End) since 1991. Having owned our house since 1985 (when it was the ONLY house on the Waialua Beach east of the pavilion), we tried every possible scenario-from long term rental to letting it sit empty except when our family came to visit. The only solution that worked was short term rentals - for all the reasons listed above, and for the option of scheduling our own family's use for enjoyment of the house and community that became our second home.

Additional Comments:

I don't understand the reasoning behind such action. Molokai needs visitors to help keep a minimum of economic stability. There is only one hotel operating and this will certainly not be enough to meet the small demand for lodging there is presently. This law would further isolate Molokai and it appears that is the true intent of this law. Already due to the restrictions on development most young people have to leave to find work. Let's not make it any more discouraging for the families on Molokai.

Additional Comments:

I would add to the above that eliminating short term rentals gives hoteliers an unfair monopoly on where a visitor can stay and what they can experience. Hoteliers funnel their guests to in-house services whenever possible, further limiting the economic stimulation of the community at large. Guests in short term rental situations have more genuine day-to day interactions with locals, by virtue of the fact that they have to go to the grocery store and fend for their own more basic needs. This has a greater impact on their ability to gain an appreciation and respect for the island. Also, the type of visitor who seeks a resort and hotel experience is different from one who seeks a home-like experience. Hotel seekers are more likely to be in consumerist vacation mode, expecting Molokai and our people to service their wants and desires, whereas people looking for a home to rent are more likely to seek cultural experience and understanding. I have seen this time and time again with people I have met in both situations. Hoteliers tend to work with their own limited cadre of outside service providers, such as tour guides and other services, which limits income opportunity for a wider part of the community. It also puts the narrative of Molokai, the story we tell ourselves, and especially to visitors, too much in their hands. Having both hotels and a limited number of vacation rentals on the island is vital to a healthy form of tourism on Molokai. Run amok, vacation rentals would have a negative impact on the island, no doubt about it; but to take them out entirely would be very bad for the island, indeed.

Additional Comments:

With deep respect to the intent behind the Molokai Planning Commission to curtail the Short Term Rental business in Maui county. My wife and I have been visiting Maui County once or twice a year by this means since 1991. We would hope that this could continue in a limited and strictly regulated form. We have deep respect for Maui County, its people and environment and hope we have done nothing but bring benefits to the local economy and support for local environmental and cultural organizations. We both understand the negative impacts some visitors and renters bring to the islands but by and large most of us desire nothing more than to enjoy Hawaii's environment and culture and hope we can be of economic benefit and leave nothing behind that could harm what we hold precious. We particularly hold Molokai to be an island and culture that is significantly endangered and strenuously work to protect it and at the same time do our best to patronize the local businesses and all the friends we have made there. over many years.

Thank you for your kind attention to this matter,

Mahalo

Additional Comments:

Molokai is a very special place and has a huge resource "the culture". Being from Molokai, raised there in the hay day of pineapple and ranching when people were working and had a purpose. So many trouble youth have ended their precious lives because of no purpose. This will be the last blow to a badly needed economy on the island.

In my experience vacation rentals are hard to get in the first place they are highly regulated on Molokai. On Maui island the renewal is every 5 years on Molokai its every year and much more costly than Maui. The kind of people that go there want the quiet and the adventure, beauty.

Some visitors I have encountered have literally spend there time cleaning up the plastic on the fishpond walls and beaches. I dont think vacation rentals are bad for Molokai. I do think that people coming to Molokai and buying property to speculate only hurts the local people raising their property tax but vacation rental are different they actually make jobs and income for the island.

Additional Comments:

As owner/operator of the island's only massage therapy location I urge you to please consider how fragile Molokai's already marginalized economy is. We have ONE hotel, with maybe 40 rooms, and in this scenario, without any STRH's, the few adventurous vacationers who do come to visit would have even fewer places to stay. Please do not hinder our island's economy further by making visiting here more difficult. Mahalo.

Additional Comments:

Short term accommodations on Molokai have declined over the last 20 years with the demise of Pau Hana Inn, Kaluakoi resort and Hotel Molokai. Adding a few more options for people, like myself, who were brought up on Molokai and prefer staying on the east end close to family and friends would be ideal. This could be monitored closely by the Molokai community and the Molokai Planning Committee. I agree a small number of permits would be preferable.

Additional Comments:

With careful enforcement and regulation of the permitting process, the ill-effects of short term rentals can be controlled.

Preventing short-term rental properties altogether does not serve any legitimate public purpose, most importantly the interest of all Molokai residents collectively.

As pointed out above, successful passage of this resolution could only act to the detriment of numerous Molokai businesses run by the local population, certainly those that are directly connected to tourism (shops offering activities such as water sports, other charters, the mule ride, and the rich cultural tradition shared by our local singing performances), but also other services such as grocers, restaurants, gift shops, taxi drivers and the like. At least the direct revenue generated by these business, and indirect revenue such as taxes, only benefit Molokai families--and thus potentially abolish any need to raise taxes or take other difficult measures to pay for the many services and programs currently enjoyed by all.

Please carefully consider the full impact this resolution would have on our beautiful island.

Mahalo for your consideration of my statements.

Subject: Vacation Rentals, Molokai

There surely are sound and fair reasons to place limits on the number of Vacation Rentals on Molokai, but to ban them altogether will interfere with the lives of many fellow citizens. It's gonna mess people up.

Molokai is naturally endowed with (thankfully) few scenic marvels and other spectacular characteristics that might draw a mass of visitors, but she has some attractions that deserve to be admired and preserved. Tourism is already a small part of Molokai's economy.

One of the attractions is the low-key atmosphere where people find a place to relax in an Aloha atmosphere. We should keep that and continue to allow residents who rely on it to keep this tiny tourist trade puttering along in it's modest way. No need expand. No need shut down.

Should there arise specific neighborhood issues let the City Council address each of them individually with sensible and appropriate regulations.
